EARTHQUAKES, GALES INFLICT HEAVY LOSSES

Wide Areas of Earth's Surface Suffer from Fury of Elements

SNOW BLANKETS WEST

American Storm Centers Over Mississippi Valley; Mercury Below Zero.

By The Associated Press

Storms lashed the Atlantic from Iceland to northern Africa today; snow blanketed the prairie states from the Dakotas to Texas; rivers spilled over their banks in France, earthquakes shook the Balkans.

High waves and high tides visited their fury in the North sea, flooding flat lands along the coast of England and endangering ships. Northeasterly gales blew up violent sandstorms on the shore.

Quakes Rock Balkans

Earthquakes demolished buildings and terrorized inhabitants in Bulgaria, Greece and South Serbia. Reports were meager, but one was known to be dead in south Serbia, where a mountain slide carried 200 sheep and their shepherd to death.

Trains were delayed throughout the Balkans with railbeds split in numerous places. Two severe shocks, both early this morning, were reported from a score of cities there.

The American storm was centered over southeastern Missouri and moving northeastward. Shipping was warned to be prepared from the Virginia cape to Jacksonville, Fla.

Mercury Drops in West

Almost every section of the Mississippi valley experienced snow, sleet, rain or cold. Kansas and Nebraska law under 3 to 8 inches. Sub-freezing temperatures endangered fruit trees in Kansas and Oklahoma.

Heavy rains and snows during the past week swelled rivers in France and they were doing much damage. Waters of the Seine had transformed some streets of Ile St. Louis into streams. The Marne menaced the territory about Rheims.

Prairies at St. Remy En Bouzmont and Larzicourt were flooded and the highway connecting St. Remy and Moncetz was cut off.

SCHOOL BOARD TAKES BIDS FOR FURNITURE

Proposals for Equipment for New Oakland Building Opened.

Sealed bids for approximately $25,000 worth of furniture and equipment for the new junior high school at Bellefontaine avenue and Jonesboro road were opened at noon today by the board of education.

Tabulation of the bids will be made next week, following which the board will consider them and award the contract.

The furniture consists of library, conference room, laboratory and auditorium furniture as well as other equipment for the various classrooms, including the shop.

Installation probably will be made in June when the new building will be practically completed, according to Superintendent George A. Bowman.

The building is expected to be ready for use next fall when the 1931-32 term begins, he said.

Approximately 25 firms submitted bids for the furniture contract, some of them bidding on only portions of the equipment.

The tabulation is not expected to be completed in time for the board's consideration at its regular March meeting Monday night, but probably will be considered at the April meeting.

SNOW FORECAST FOR TONIGHT AND SUNDAY

Marion Gets Part of Storm That Strikes Middlewest Blow.

An early March snow storm which blew in from the west last night brought snow, strong winds and low temperatures here today. Snowfall began early this morning after the arrival of sub-freezing temperatures and driving winds last night.

The storm is scheduled to spend the week-end in Marion, bringing snow, rain and possibly sleet tonight, with promises of colder weather and snow Sunday.

Although the storm did some damage in the middlewest, particularly around Quincy, Ill., it was welcomed by farmers as partial drouth relief. A sleet storm paralyzed power and communication lines at Quincy, forcing every factory in the city to suspend operations. Highways in some sections were blocked by snow.

The mercury dropped well below the freezing mark last night with an official low reading of 28, according to records of Dr. E. H. Raffensperger, local observer. The low mark followed an 18 degree drop from a high of 46 yesterday.

A year ago today Marionites were enjoying temperatures that presaged the arrival of spring. The high a year ago was 55, the low 38.

RASKOB TALK STIRS UP 1932 SPECULATION

Rise of Prohibition Issue Starts Presidential Gossip in Both Parties.

HOOVER GAINS GROUND

Sentiment Swings Toward His Renomination; Boosted by La Follette.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 7—The Democratic row precipitated by Chairman Raskob of the national committee has led to a full flowering of political speculation concerning 1932.

Not only in the party of Jefferson, but in Republican ranks as well the next presidential race has become an absorbing topic for public utterance. And, on one side independents are getting together, disclaiming any third party intentions but bent on making their mark through coalescing on objectives which have been somewhat scattered.

Most conspicuous in Democratic ranks was a concerted effort to smother the Raskob plan to line up the party for his "home rule", state liquor control project. But out of the background a recurrent presidential boom for Maryland anti-prohibitionist, Governor Ritchie, had marched forth with an indorsement by the free state's legislature. Rumblings of a split between Alfred E. Smith and Governor Roosevelt in New York, though denied, occupied many political speculators with emphasis on the bearing such an event would have on Roosevelt's presidential chances.

Hoover Sentiment Spreads

Hoover's name was being uttered at Republican rallies all over the country in a not unusual swing towards renomination of the incumbent, but heartened by the disturbance in Democracy's camp.

Several Democratic leaders, active in trying to head off the Raskob program, continued their assertions that embracing such an issue would amount to throwing away the 1932 chances of the party, though otherwise they appeared excellent.

Some Republicans agreed with them. Out of a Texas meeting of party leaders came a prediction that the G. O. P. would have easy sailing as a result of the Democratic row. That group yesterday indorsed without qualification President Hoover's record and called for his renomination. So did the state convention of the party in Michigan.

The utterance, interesting because of its source, was attributed to Senator LaFollette of Wisconsin, independent Republican, who was quoted in Philadelphia as saying Mr. Hoover's renomination on a bone-dry platform was a foregone conclusion.

No Third Party Trend

He said again that he saw no immediate upwelling of public sentiment to justify a third party movement. Of the progressive meeting called to meet here March 11 and 12, he said:

"We will formulate plans to force our economic program on the attention of the next congress."

As to the Smith-Roosevelt situation, some commentators predicted there would be a split if Governor Roosevelt sought to avoid further commitment on prohibition in a bid for southern support.

Justice Holmes, 90 Sunday, To Appear in Radio Debut

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 7—Oliver Wendell Holmes, associate justice of the supreme court, makes his debut as a radio speaker Sunday, March 8, his ninetieth birthday.

In his second floor study today workmen tiptoed about installing a microphone. There is not even a radio set in the house. One will be connected after the microphnoe is put in.

The speech by the oldest man ever to serve on the supreme bench is the first public notice he has taken of a birthday.

They have been events for a long time to those about him. For years a deluge of requests from newspapermen for interviews and a series of plans by admirers for public demonstrations have preceded each anniversary.

• • •

THE newspapermen get no further than his secretary and the admirers are always forced to bow to his pronounced distaste of public eulogies. Several times fellow members of the court have felt a timely tribute was due, but even a proposal to place a vase of red roses before him on the bench remained a proposal because it was felt he might not like it.

His friends say his logical mind can see no reason for a fanfaronade over birthdays. His concession on his ninetieth anniversary is regarded as reluctant yielding to the desire of sincere friends to honor him.

The radio program in his honor begins at 10:30 p. m. (Marion time) Sunday night. Dean Charles E. Clark of the Yale Law school, from the studios of the Columbia Broad-

FEAR FIVE PERISH AS TUGBOAT SINKS

Two Known Dead, Three Others Missing, After Brooklyn Harbor Blast.

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK March 7—The tugboat Joyce Card blew up as she was moving out of Erie basin, Brooklyn, today, killing two men and injuring three. Three others are missing.

The boat, owned by the Card Towing Line, Inc., had just been overhauled and was starting out on her first assignment when a blast in the boiler room sent her to the bottom.

The three men rescued were on the deck at the time of the explosion. They were picked up by rescuers who dived from other tugs nearby. The rest of the crew was below deck and it was believed certain that all were dead. Two bodies were recovered.

TO DISCUSS PLANS FOR NEW HOSPITAL

Representatives of Five Counties To Meet at Marysville Tuesday.

Possible means of financing a proposed tuberculosis hospital for Marion and four other counties will be taken up at meeting of commissioners of Marion, Harding, Union, Logan and Delaware counties in Marysville Tuesday.

Marion County Commissioners O. W. Kinnamon, O. C. McCurdy and W. M. King will attend the meeting.

Advisability of submitting a proposed bond issue to a vote of the people in the five interested counties to finance construction of the institution will be among the topics discussed. Since Marion county's tax duplicate is the largest in the district in tuberculosis work, this county would be obliged to bear the greatest burden of expense. The expense of erecting and operating the institution would be pro-rated among the interested counties, according to tentative plans.

The meeting Tuesday is adjourned from a meeting of health commissioners, county commissioners and others interested in the proposed sanatorium in Bellefontaine two weeks ago.

N. CAROLINA CELLS FLAMING DEATH TRAPS

11 Negro Prisoners Lose Lives as Blaze Sweeps Wooden Structure.

41 RESCUED BY GUARDS

Coroner Begins Investigation as Rumors of Incendiarism Are Heard.

By The Associated Press

KENANSVILLE, N. C., March 7—Trapped in their cells, 11 Negro convicts burned to death early today as flames swept through the huge, wooden stockade of Duplin county.

Forty-one other prisoners, all Negroes except 12, were led from the burning building by guards.

Owen Basden and B. S. Nicholson, the guards on duty, discovered the fire shortly after 2 a. m.

The flames started in the kitchen. The origin had not been determined.

Scant Protection

The stockade, built of heavy timbers, was located one mile from here. It was virtually without fire protection.

Dan H. Bridgers, Duplin county coroner, began an investigation immediately. Pending its completion, he requested the two guards not to discuss the fire.

Residents of the community who first reached the fire said, however, that Basden rushed into the burning building time after time to lead forth the prisoners.

Some indication that the blaze might have been of incendiary origin was being investigated.

Victims Roasted to Death

The stockade was a quadrangle. Corrugated iron covered the fatal cell block, which was in the corner, and apparently the victims were literally roasted to death as the flames from adjoining structures turned the iron white hot.

The stockade was built after the manner of many of the earlier prisons in the United States. It consisted of a high "stock" or stake fence covered with corrugated iron. Inside were cell houses. Similar prisons were used by both armies during the Civil war.

GARY YOUTH'S TRIAL CLOSING

Arguments in Liquor Party Murder Case on Program for Monday.

KIRKLAND TELLS STORY

Gives Version of Girl's Tragic Death Before Crowded Courtroom.

By The Associated Press

VALPARAISO, Ind., March 7—By tonight, the record of testimony in the trial of Virgil Kirkland, 20-year-old Gary, Ind., steel worker, for the murder of his high school sweetheart, Arlene Draves, 18, will be completed. On next Monday the state and prosecution will argue the case.

Judge Grant Crumpacker will give the jury his instructions and the sensational chain of events which began with a drinking party of Gary young folk last November will be completed, except for the verdict.

Gives Cause of Death

Dr. E. A. Jones of Hammond, who performed the second autopsy over the body of Arlene Draves at Reynolds, the girl's burial place, testified at the trial today that brain hemorrhage, contusions, and shock from assault caused the young woman's death.

Dr. Jones, 41, graduated from Indiana university in 1916, was the sixth medical expert to testify. His findings corroborated the original autopsy report made by Dr. James C. Burcham, coroner's physician at Gary, last December a few days after the girl died at a drinking party. Kirkland and four other young men were accused of her murder and assault.

The defense holds the girl, while in a drunken stupor, fell on her head and sustained a brain injury that caused her death. The state claims Kirkland struck her on the

Both Cautious

(Will Rogers Special)

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif., March 7—The Republican papers are having a field day, laughing at the Democrats on account of their split over prohibition.

Well, they better get all the laughs in they can, for wait till they meet and see their split, for they get more to split. Both sides are going to do exactly the same thing. They are going to straddle the thing, if they have to split their carcass clear up to their neck to do it.

Neither side has got the nerve to come out in the open, for they are not sure which side the most votes are on.

The minute they find out, they will both be on that side so quick that it won't be an issue.

N. C. Radio Reception Faulty? Blame Sun Spots, Ohio Astronomer Says

Special to The Star.

DELAWARE, O., March 7—Sun spots have shown a marked increase during the last week and radio reception has been adversely affected, Dr. Harlan T. Stetson, director of Perkins observatory at Ohio Wesleyan university here, said today.

The present increase in sun spots has followed a period marked by an unusually small amount of solar activity. The increase has not only been observed at the Perkins observatory but has been reported by the Mt. Wilson observatory.

This increase in sun spots ... storms ... Dr. ... first of March would see such an evidence of increased activity.

"The increase in sun spots observed during the past week merely serves to furnish additional evidence to support our theory that there is a secondary increase in sun spots every 13 months," he said.

WIDOW REJOICES IN SLAYING ACQUITTAL

Exonerate Mrs. Bennett of Bridge-Game Murder of Husband.

By The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 7—Mrs. Myrtle A. Bennett rejoiced today in acquittal on a murder charge growing out of the bridge game slaying of her husband.

"Words can not express my thanks for vindication," she said.

The 35-year-old widow was freed yesterday by the verdict of a jury which had deliberated her fate eight and one half hours.

Mrs. Bennett trembled as the jury entered. The verdict read, she smiled in comprehension and arose, supported by J. Francis O'Sullivan of defense counsel. She turned to the jury, a handkerchief to her lips:

"I thank you, gentlemen," she said.

The decision removed her from jeopardy for the killing of John Gilbert Bennett, 36, in their fashionable apartment the night of Sept. 29, 1929, following a quarrel over his failure to fulfill a four-spade bridge bid. The defense contended Bennett was slain in a struggle over a pistol he asked his wife to obtain for him.

John V. Hill, assistant prosecuting attorney remarked:

"It looks like an open season on husbands."

Leslie R. Choate, jury foreman, said the state "did not prove her guilty beyond a reasonable doubt."

JUSTICE HOLMES, 90 TO TALK OVER RADIO

Oldest Man in Supreme Court To Observe Anniversary Sunday.

10:55 have been reserved for Justice Holmes.

He seems as vigorous at 90 as he was at 89.

This anniversary promises to be happier than his eighty-ninth birthday—a day of gloom. Edward Terry Sanford, associate justice, died in the morning, a heart attack coming suddenly. William Howard Taft, chief justice, who had been sick a long time, passed away in the afternoon.

A friend of both, he was especially close to Taft. They frequently disagreed on interpretation of the law but they were very close personally.

Oliver Wendell Holmes is one of the few persons who in life have become legendary figures. It is a little hard for the average man to realize that a man who was wounded three times in the Civil war; who wrote "The Common Law," and whose legal opinions have become classics, still is a part of the hurly-burly life of 1931.

Those about the court, however, know that his mind is a torch that has not flickered, nor dimmed with the years. As usual, he has handed down his share of opinions at this session of court.

Just Things

Travel

FOLKS who cast a wary and disapproving eye on the present mode of travel and then heave a couple of loud signs for the good old days of safe and sane travel should stop, look and listen to the rules and regulations for travel 100 years ago. Just how it was done then and what the ticket agent had on his hands are told in an article revived during the recent centenary of England's first railroad the Liverpool & Manchester. Here are the regulations:

"Any person desiring to travel from Liverpool to Manchester or vice versa, or any portion of the journey thereof must, 24 hours beforehand, make applications to the station agent at the place of departure, giving his name, address, place of birth, age, occupation and reason for desiring to travel.

"The station agent, upon assuring himself that the applicant desires to travel for a just and lawful cause, shall thereupon issue a ticket to the applicant who shall travel by the train named thereon

"Trains will start at their point of departure as near schedule time as possible, but the company does not guarantee when they will reach their destination.

"Trains not reaching their destination before dark will put up at one of the several stopping places along the route for the night and passengers must pay and provide for their own lodging during the night.

"Luggage will be carried on the roof of the carriages. If such luggage gets wets, the company will not be responsible for any loss attached thereto."

Revivals

NOW that one joins in, (with the help of a few tra, la las) to "After the Ball," "The Baggage Coach Ahead" and a few more of the old timers on the radio, there surely will be a revival of some of those old-time pieces which used to thrill audiences by the hour, yard or what have you. There are folks who remember how they sat, just fairly green with envy, when the blond, curley-headed "oratress" of th class recited "Kentucky Belle," "Curfew Shall Not Ring Tonight," "The Burial of Moses," and others. And with gestures, too.

Ginghams

FASHION predicts gingham for smart folks and to be real smartish one might wear a pique hat. Plaid ginghams sure filled the bill for the last word in frocks in the ken of one woman who is even now casting her optics about for a good looking pattern but who as yet has not declared herself on the pique hat. Being among friends she even reminesced about a black crepe paper hat which gasped a couple of times about the time of the gingham era.

CHAPTER 6

What Does He Know?

"Oh, Doctor' As bad as that? You aren't taking too big a risk, are you?" said Sister Weldon, flashing brilliant eyes and teeth at the doctor. "We aren't allowed to take anybody who is really over the border-line, and we won't want anybody here who might possibly be dangerous, do we?"

"Suppose you leave that to me."

"Which nurse shall I put on to him?"

"No nurse. No treatment. No medicine. He's not ill. I told matron and Nurse Jones to get him a room ready, and Dr. MacAdoo and I will look after him. I don't want any one to take any obvious notice of him. But every one will keep an eye on him and report to you anything of interest."

"I see, doctor."

"How's Miss Skinner this morning?"

"Much the same, doctor. Nurse Edwards says she offered her a diamond ring if she'd manage to get her out to Wilmerford."

"To to the postoffice, I suppose? She couldn't get any at the chemist's, of course. See that she opens all letters in your presence. Always give them to her yourself. A lot of cocaine or morphia can be packed in an innocent-looking letter.

"Any more parcels for Colonel Campbell?"

Sister Weldon smiled.

"A box of books, doctor."

"With a bottle of whisky under them?"

"Two. With books beautifully packed on all four sides."

"How's Miss Lauderdell?"

"Rather depressed. Otherwise fairly all right. She began to tell me that she was better since she stopped taking Dr. MacAdoo's medicine. I'm afraid I snubbed her sharply."

"Thank you, sister. I'll see you as usual, for reports. It was about Mr. Waye that I sent for you. Tell them to let him alone, and not to be surprised at anything he says or does. He has delusions, the most prominent being that he has committed a crime and is surrounded by criminals."

"One moment, matron," he added as Sister Weldon arose and departed.

The door closed and the doctor's maner changed.

"Get Manoel, Jimmy and Lou," he said quietly. "Don't all come together."

One by one, at a few minutes' interval, Mr. James, the matron, Nurse Jones and Dr. MacAdoo entered, and seated themselves in the consulting-room.

"Seen the paper, Manoel?" asked the doctor

"Not yet. Anything in it?" replied Dr. Manoel Machado (alias Emmanuel MacAdoo) formerly of Santos, Bahia, Rio de Janeiro and Brazil generally.

"Very much in it," replied Dr. Charters, frowning as he again scanned the paper. "He's bumped Spider Schlitz off, sure enough Listen to this," and Dr. Charters proceeded to read the account of the murder of a Mr. Theophilus Webb, a wealthy race-horse owner, of Witherby End.

Apparently robbery had been the motive. The unfortunate victim had evidently been attacked as he sat, probably asleep, in an armchair before his library fire

The police had valuable clews in footprints, finger-marks and a curious anonymous letter. Moreover, a suspicious-looking person had been particularly noticed by the station master at Wellingby station, a few miles from Witherby End, taking the early morning train to Southampton.

"Wonder if he got what he went for?" murmured Mr. James, eyeing Dr. Charters meaningly, if not suspiciously.

"And whether he wrote the anonymous letter himself," mused the doctor. "I don't see why he shouldn't have done it, to put the cops on a false scenet," he added. "I allow he had it in for Spider, and scattered a few drawers to make it look like a burglary."

"Perhaps some pard of Spider's —who Spider double-crossed— croaked in jail and put this guy wise before he died," suggested Mr. James with another meaning look, "and he came and collected something as soon as he got out."

"Yes," agreed the doctor, eyeing Mr. James hardily.

"What was he after, Doc?" inquired Dr. MacAdoo.

"After? Oh, some papers and boodle," replied the doctor. "That is, if anybody did send him...Or perhaps this Waye and Spider Schlitz made a haul together and were both sent up on another count, just as they'd cached it. Maybe Spider got a shorter jolt, came out before Waye and skipped with the lot and disappeared.

"Yes, if this mysterious Waye stiff hadn't told me he'd done it— the moment I'd read this account I should have said that some one had come over from Chi on purpose and done what he had promised to do.

"Who is he?" said Dr. Charters, again turning to Mr. James.

"Search me," replied that gentleman. "But I'd swear I'd seen him."

"Does he get you that way, Fanny?" he added, turning to the matron.

"He does," was the reply. "The moment that guy walked in, I said to myself, 'Phwat's this? I know your phiz, me bhoy.'"

"And you haven't got him taped, Lou?"

"Nope," replied Nurse Jones. "But I have seen him in Chi. Him or his double I'll place him."

"P'raps he used to wear a hairy face," mused matron. "A beard is a good disguise—when you cut it off.

"Or put it on, either," she added, smiling lovingly at Dr. Charters.

"What are we to do with him?" asked Dr. MacAdoo.

"Bump him off I say," he continued. "Dead men tell no tales."

Jubilee's Pardner

* * *

A Story of Boyhood Adventure

BY JUDD M. LEWIS

SATURDAY. It looked like rain when I got up and opened the window to let Jubilee down by the rope in his teeth, but it was Saturday morning, and I would rather it would be Saturday than any other day, even if it did rain, so I let him down and got into my britches as soon as I could and went down three stairs at a time, and got the warm water for the cow feed and went out to work on my dummed animals, and the bunch was playing around the acting pole and the dogs were playing with each other and growling and rolling over and making out like they were fighting, and there was a real robin on the fence, and he took a slant at the bunch and at the dogs, and then he seen our cat going acrosst the yard toardat where he was and making out like she didn't see him, so he flew away just as Whitey chunked a rock at him, and the rock went over the fence and we heard some glass preak, and we all faded away into the barn, except Whitey. He went right over to the fence and got up on an old keg that had been there quite a while, and just as his face raised above the fence a lady's face raised up on the other side and their noses almost touched. She was mad. Whitey took off his hat and said, "Good morinng." From where we were peeking out we could see the lady looking supprized, and then she swallowed a couple of times, and said, "Well?" and he said' ,'I hope the rock didn't hit anyone." She said, "What did you throw it for?" He said, "It was an accident, and I am very sorry.' She said, "Well, that don't mend my broken window." He said, "I know that, but I am going to my house and tell my mother and she will foam you and apologize and send a man to fix the window right away." Then she asted him his name and where he lived, and he told her, and then he said, "I am sorry you don't believe me." The lady said, "I do believe you ,and I am going to foam your mamma and tell her what a perfect little gentleman her son is. And never mind the window. Accidents will happen." Whitey told her he couldn't think of not minding the window, and he was going home and have it fixed right away, and he jumped off the keg and skun out for home. That is the kind of a fella he is. That is the kind of a fella I am going to be too.

We were still playing on the acting pole after breakfast when a man came with a pane of glass to fix the window, and Whitey came back, and when we asted him what his mother done to him he said she kissed him. We spent so much time talking about it that it almost spoilt our day. Grown ups ain't so bad if you treat them right. We went to the pasture and the stink factory and the lake shore, but there wasn't anything to do to have any fun, so we went back to the acting pole.

"Heart of a Wife"

BY ADELE GARRISON

Junior and Roderick Insist on Naming the Baby.

RODERICK echoed Junior's plaint as the two boys came eagerly down to the baby's carriage upon my telling them that she was awake.

"'Baby' Graham," he said reflectively. 'That sounds like an awful funny name. There's a girl they call 'Babe' lives on our street in Detroit, though, and—Jerry Ticer has a horse named 'Babe'."

There was a distinct change in his voice as if lending glamour to the baby's temporary cognomen.

"Yes, that's so," Junior assented so gravely that I bit my lips to keep back even a smile which might have betrayed my amusement to them.

"But, Mums," Junior was standing erect now as a soldier might, and his hazel eyes, so like his father's, were looking squarely into mine. "I honestly think she ought to have a more-more-special name than just 'Baby.' She's such a swell kid, you know."

The most impressive accolade of praise in his vocabulary had just descended upon his tiny sister. That was patent to an eye less loving and therefore less keen than mine. I resisted the impulse to catch him up and hug him tightly, knowing that he would be embarrassed by the caress. Either Junior or Roderick loves to be petted when alone with me, and when I am reading to them, and regardless of any onlookers, they snuggle down, one on each side of me with their tousled heads tucked against my arms, for all the world like fledglings under the wings of a mother bird. But I am very careful about kissing or embracing either one before the other, or before other people.

"She's not going to be called 'Baby' always" I said, making a flash decision upon a subject which had been carefully skirted by all of us since a memorable argument between Dicky and his mother at the hospital a week after the birth of the baby. Katherine, coming into the room where she had left the visitors, and seeing my flushed face and too bright eyes, had become instantly the martinet, and sent them home unceremoniously, forbidding any more family visitors.

The next day she had rescinded her ban as to Dicky, who, she knew, would not repeat the breach of sick room decorum, but she had stipulated that his mother must not know of his visits and must not come again to the hospital until I was strong enough to cope with domestic battles. But Mother Graham, thoroughly frightened and remorseful, and imagining Dicky equally banned with herself, had not spoken of the baby's name for several days afterward

"Swell Names" for Baby

But it was a question which could not be much longer postponed, I realized that, but I was surprised at the look of intelligence, as of something planned, which passed between my young son and his cousin.

The next instant that look was made vocal.

"Mums!" my son said, and hesitated.

"Auntie Madge!" Roderick supplemented, and also became temporarily tongue-tied.

I knew what was coming now and set the brake on my laughter muscles.

"Kin we name the baby, Mums? Kin we?" they chorused.

"Can is for tomatoes" I quoted mechanically. "There is no such word as 'kin'—I mean used that way," I added, hastily, with a reminiscent mental glance at the dictionary.

"Well, then, 'May' we name the baby? We've got such swell names for her."

"I don't know," I evaded. "It depends upon what your names are. You see your sister will have to keep whatever name is given her all through her life, and we have to give her one that she would like when she grows up just as well as she does now. Children and grown-up people do not agree about names, so we have to give babies names that we think they will like when they grow up That is the reason why grown-ups have to name the babies. Do you see what I mean?"

"Oh, yes, I see," each boy said dutifully, but they were far from being convinced, and the next second Roderick added:

"But I'm sure she'd like these names of ours when she grows up, they're so swell."

"Tell me what they are," I said, "but remember that I'm only one of the people to decide upon your sister's name."

They paid on attention to the proviso, but looked at each other, again with the expression of one keeping a pact

"You won that last time," Roderick said "You kin—can—may tell her first."

Junior turned an eager face to mine.

"I've got two of the swellest names you ever heard," he said. "They're 'Ruby Pearl,' or, if you want to," he added magnanimously, "you can turn 'em round, and call her 'Pearl Ruby.'"

HARDING UPSETS COLUMBUS NORTH 22-16

PRESIDENTS FLASH GOOD FORM TO WIN SURPRISE VICTORY

Morgan Stars in Opening Tournament Battle; Central Next Opponent.

BY BOB KIRKPATRICK
Sports Editor, The Star

HARDING High school's basketeers provided the first upset of the 1931 central district class A cage tournament at Delaware yesterday by handing Columbus North a convincing 22 to 16 beating. North, runner-up for the city championship of Columbus, had been a prohibitive favorite to eliminate Harding. The Harding victory yesterday avenged a defeat handed the Presidents by North last season in the first round of the 1930 tourney.

North got off to an early lead over Harding by sinking a toss from the charity stripe which was tied up a short time later by a similar free throw by a Harding player. Harding gained a two point lead over North a short time later on a two-pointer but promptly lost it when North found the net for three points in succession.

The Polar Bears lengthened their advantage over the Bohyermen during the remainder of the first period and led at the one-quarter mark of the game 9 to 6.

Harding Opens Up

In the second period Harding came back strong and set the North five down with a single field goal, meanwhile adding a total of five points to its own total to finish the first half of the game in an 11-11 deadlock.

Harding's smooth-working offense clicked again in the third frame and left North trailing 16 to 14, by the time the three-quarter mark of the game was reached. North failed to hit the net for a single point in the third period until late in the frame when a pair of long shots found the net for a quartet of markers.

A Futile Effort

North launched a furious but futile drive for points in the last period in a final effort to snatch victory from defeat and eliminate Harding from the tourney. A barrage of long range attempts by Polar Bear sharpshooters clattered off the Harding bank-board but failed to drop through the net on more than one occasion in the entire frame.

Harding outplayed north in all of the game after the first period. Vestal and Morgan turned in the flashiest exhibition of floor work for the Presidents although the remainder of the team performed in classy form. Morgan was high scorer for both teams with a quartet of field goals and a pair of free throws for 10 points. Bob Smith's guarding broke up a lot of shots for North.

Boos Greet Stalling

North brought down a chorus of boos and hisses from the spectators in the first half when it elected to stall the ball when in possession of a three point lead. Harding refused to attempt to break it up for three minutes but suddenly swept through and took possession of the ball and battled its way into the lead which it never lost.

Harding will meet Columbus Central, champion of Columbus and conqueror of Circleville in the opening round of the tourney yesterday, tonight at 7:30.

CENTRAL LOSES

Cardington Comes Back Strong in Second Half To Win.

Central Junior High school basketeers held a lead over Cardington last night on the Y floor for the first half of the game but faltered in the latter part of the game and allowed the out-of-town team to romp off with a 24 to 19. Whitcum led the scoring for the losers with 14 points.

In a preliminary game to the Central Junior-Cardington fray, the home room championship of Central was decided. Main Assembly 8 and Room 19 were the finalists in the tourney to decide the school title. Main Assembly 8 was victor in the championship tilt, defeating Room 19, 30 to 21. Burdet for the winners and Corrigan for the losers played the best games.

SPORTS

FROM all indications the first North Central Amateur basketball tournament carded for The Star auditorium on March 27 and 28 is going to be a huge success. Already some of the best cage aggregations in the central part of Ohio have sent in entry fees and several others have signified intentions of doing so in the near future.

The latest team to send in its entrance check is the Parkinson Plumbers' road team of Mansfield. The entry fee for this team, reputed to be one of the classiest court outfits in Mansfield arrived by mail today.

• • •

Almost as startling as the Harding upset of Columbus North yesterday is the surprise defeat of Ashland High school by a comparative outsider, Bellevue. On the basis of its showing in the North Central Ohio league Ashland had been installed as a favorite to go through the Sandusky tournament with flying colors. Yep, and so was North supposed to beat Harding.

• • •

Harding apparently need have little worry about lack of material for athletic teams in the 1931-32 school year. Graduation will wreak less havoc with the various athletic lineups this year than in any for some time past.

In football the Presidents will be blessed with an abundance of returning material. Of the 11 starting players last season seven will return for competition next fall. Not only will a large number of first stringers be back in uniform but a good supply of reserve timber will be available.

• • •

In basketball the same situation exists. Of the starting lineup of Vestal, Morgan, Merkel, Ling, and Smith, Smith and Merkel are the only two who will be ineligible to don a Harding unifrom next season. These two men have played good ball for Marion but the places of both should be filled without exceptional difficulty. Capable reserves are available who should be moulded into replacements for both Merkel and Smith.

Morgan and Vestal give promise of proving exceedingly valuable to Harding next year and Ling should fill the center post in such a manner as to bring joy to the hearts of Harding followers. The coming year in Harding athletics should produce something of which Marion can be proud.

GALION, MANSFIELD, SHELBY WIN GAMES

Fostoria Trims Willard in Fourth Contest; Finals Played Tonight.

NORTH Central Ohio League schools came through the first round of the Northwest sectional basketball tournament at Bucyrus yesterday with flying colors. Of the four schools competing in the Class A play three were victors. The fourth, Bucyrus, was beaten by Mansfield, another N. C. O. league school.

Galion, co-winner of the league championship had little difficulty in handing Upper Sandusky a one-sided 44 to 28 beating. The Orangemen jumped into the lead at the start of the game and were never headed. Davis of Galion scored 15 points.

Shelby Is Winner

Shelby High, which ended the N. C. O. season in third place eliminated the supposedly strong Findlay aggregation. The final score was 26 to 21. Findlay played on even terms with Shelby for the first half of the game but weakened in the second half and Shelby took the lead.

The hopes of Bucyrus to make a good showing in tournament play despite its poor showing in the season's play, was shattered when Mansfield's Tygers, defeated the Redmen 35 to 29. Mansfield led the game all the way.

Fostoria Wins

In the only game of the opening round in which an N. C. O. team did not figure Fostoria emerged the winner over Willard, 21 to 16. Willard trailed the winners all through the game.

The semi-final games of the tourney will be played this afternoon with Fostoria meeting Galion at 2 p. m., and Mansfield playing Shelby an hour later. At 8:30 p. m. the final game will be played between the winners of the above listed pair of games.

Retzlaff Scores Clean Knockout Over Heeney

By The Associated Press

DETROIT, March 7 — Charlie Retzlaff, coming young heavyweight of Duluth, Minn., scored a clean knockout over Tom Heeney, hard rock from below the equator, last night.

The youngster spotted Heeney 15 pounds, weighing 193 to Tom's 207, and won handily, out-boxing and out-fighting Heeney in every round but the sixth. He knocked the New Zealander down twice in the seventh round. In his second fall, Heeney took the full count of ten by Referee Al Day.

As Day finished the count, Heeney was trying to get up, and Day, fearing that Retzlaff might strike the fallen gladiator again, motioned Retzlaff away as he lifted old Tom. "It was a clean knockout," Day said after the fight, "and I believe the first ever scored over Heeney."

About 18,000 persons saw the fight, with paid attendance announced as $15,406.

Vernon Heights Beaten by Mansfield Quintet

Vernon Junior High basketball team was defeated last night on Vernon court by Simpson Junior of Mansfield 12 to 6, in game that was more an exhibition of stalling than of basketball. Mansfield stalled the ball almost from the start, frustrating all of Vernon's attempts to speed up the game.

Vestal was the only Vernon player to score more than one field goal. He totaled a pair of two pointers.

Tuffy Griffiths Wins Fight with Levinsky

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, March 7 — Gerald Ambrose "Tuffy" Griffiths, the young Sioux City, Ia., heavyweight, woke up today, no longer bothered by the threat of King Levinsky of the dynamite right hand—and worth $25,000 more than he was yesterday, to boot.

Blending his boxing skill with enough slugging to keep the Kingfish's mighty right from doing too much damage, Griffiths last night pounded out a ten round decision before 15,066 highly excited and pleased customers in the Chicago stadium.

HARD-HITTING TEAM TO REPRESENT BRUIN CLUB THIS SEASON

Cubs Expected To Place Stronger Outfit in Field for 1931 Race.

By The Associated Press.

AVALON, SANTA CATALINA ISLAND, Cal., March 7—Activities at the Chicago Cubs training lair here presage bigger and more frequent base hits than last season.

Rogers Hornsby, the playing-pilot has all the details worked out to put the hardest hitting nine ever into the National league 1931 race, except for the small matter of sorting out a logical batting order, and he has dropped several hints along this line.

Lewis Robert Wilson, otherwise known as Hack, the 1930 home run king with his 56 circuit wallops, is the individual around whom such plans are laid, but the Rajah also hoped to figure in a vital fashion in the scheme of things.

Infield Stronger

As batting averages go, the Cubs' infield appears to be many points stronger than in 1930. Rogers appeared in only 42 games last year, due to a broken leg, and wound up with a .308.

Clarence (Footsy) Blair turned in a neat job of protecting second, but could hit only .273.

Likewise, Lester Bell saw but 74 games from third base and hit only .278, well below his 1929 average. Clyde Beck was substituted frequently because of Bell's weak throwing arm, and while his work on the footpaths was unexcelled, he hit 213. Bell is reported in good condition this spring.

Second to none of these factors, in Hornsby's opinion is one. Elwood English, a prize 24-year-old shortstop. The Rajah can't think of enough compliments for Woody.

What Chicago's infield does lack is a bunch of ballhanging reserves, but in the outfield there seems to be nothing to wish for.

The Cubs' regular outfield, composed of Wilson, Riggs Stephenson and Kiki Cuyler, averaged .359 at the bat last year, yet optimistic Hornsby thinks he can squeeze out still a few more hits.

May Shift Wilson

He proposes to do it by shifting Wilson to right field, where he will not have to do so much fly chasing. Wilson hit .356 besides setting a National league homerun record. If this is done, Cuyler will move to center field and Stephenson to left. Cuyler hit .355 and Stephenson .367.

A pair of rookies, Vincent Barton, a big Canadian from Baltimore of the International league and Johnny Moore, from Los Angeles of the Pacific coast league, both of whom hit .342 last year, are likely looking prospects.

To strengthen the catching department, Bob Grace, making his second try, probably will understudy Gabby Hartnett, and while he hit only .323 with Reading of the International league, compared with Hartnett's .335, he appears to be capable of staying in big time company this season.

Cornell, Penn Favored To Battle for Honors

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, March 7 — The east's greatest indoor college meet, the intercollegiate A. A. A. A. track and field championships, will be held tonight in the one hundred and second engineers armory with an array of 300 athletes from 24 colleges and universities.

Cornell and Penn wound up in a tie at 27½ points for the team title a year ago and another close battle is forecast with Penn a favorite.

Sharing interest with the 12 regularly scheduled events is a special half-mile race in which Russell H. Chapman, crack middle distance ace from Bates college, will attempt to lower Lloyd Hahn's world standard of 1:51 2-5 for the distance.

IN MAIN GO HERE

Allan Eustace, the big scissors boy pictured above, will attempt to knock Regis Siki from his Abyssinian throne at the Steam Shovel gym Tuesday night. They will meet in the main go of a wrestling card.

Three Schools Favored in Big 10 Indoor Meet

By The Associated Press.

MADISON, Wis., March 7—Michigan, Illinois and Ohio State today stood out as front rank contenders for the 1931 Western conference indoor track title which will be decided in the University of Wisconsin field house tonight.

The Wolverines, who last night qualified three men in the 60 yard dash, one each in the mile, half mile and the 440-yard runs and another in the 60-yard high hurdles, was a slight favorite to take the title defended by Wisconsin, but the struggle was considered a wide open affair.

NEW CHALLENGERS APPEAR IN DISTRICT CAGE TOURNAMENTS

Favorites in District Play Eliminated by Unknown Entries; Ashland Loses.

By The Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., March 7—New challengers were emerging and dropping a number of favorites by the wayside today as Ohio's high school basketball teams strove for the right to compete for the state championships two weeks hence.

Akron East, which last year was runner-up to the famed Dayton Stivers five, was eliminated at the outset last night by Akron North, 23 to 22, as the class A sectional tournaments got under way throughout the state. Stivers, defending a championship won for three years straight, started off with a 34 to 6 triumph over Dayton Roosevelt, but faced a tough one in Springfield today. Springfield has defeated Stivers twice before this year.

In the Sandusky section, Bellevue became an outstanding favorite by conquering Ashland, 26 to 25, in a nip and tuck battle. Ashland had been counted on as a sure contender at Columbus.

District eliminations for both class A and class B teams will end tonight, the winners advancing to the sectional tournaments next week and the winners in these will gather here March 20 and 21 to fight it out for the two state titles."

STOCKS GAIN AFTER SLUMP

Market Rebounds Briskly After Weak Opening; Power Issues Up.

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 7—After a further slump in the first few minutes of trading today, the stock market rebounded briskly.

Although the week-end business and trade surveys were highly conservative and offered virtually no encouragement to the market, week-end adjustment of accounts required more repurchases by shorts than sales by longs. Bullish activity reappeared in the electric power issues.

Radio Keith quickly rose a point in response to its 1930 report showing profits more than double 1929, when organization expenses were heavy. Case also formed in response to reports of 1930 net of $9.62 a share, or substantially better than expected.

Allied Chemical sold up more than 2 points, and other shares up a point or more, included American Can, Bethlehem Steel, Public Service of N. J., Electric Power & Light, Standard Gas, Byers, and Radio. Several shares dropped 1 to 2 points in the early trades, among them Johns Manville and Safeway stores.

Sterling cables were steady at $4.85¾.

Will Says the Importance of Governments Is Highly Overrated; People Only Ones Who Can Change Things

French, Who Do Things Cockeyed, Have Made Greatest Recovery.

BY WILL ROGERS

WELL all I know is just what I read in the papers. I got back home and am working in the Movies and have a little time in between scenes to kinder see what is going on here and there. You know that King of Spain is quite a fellow. They been trying to oust him these Republicans have for years and just when it looks like he was a goner why he comes up again. They aint going to get rid of that fellow. In fact I doubt if they could improve on him.

Governments dont have much to do with Nations anyhow, their importance is greatly overrated. The real business of a country is carried on no matter what King or Emperor, or Dictator or Chief, or President. Even us over here we raise all the fuss and mess around over whether it will be a Republican or a Democrat, and one hundred and twenty million have to make their living under either one of them and it dont matter much. Its the people of a Country that have to change and not the Governments, and they don't change much, so whats the use of worrying. The whole thing is a lot of Apple sauce.

Not All Great Men

We have lived under over thirty Presidents. They couldn't have all been great, in fact if we told the truth about em, mayby some of em was pretty punk. But we drug along in spite of em.

Look at the Frenchmen. They look like to us they do everything Cockeyed. Their House of Deputies looks like a Keystone Comedy Company, yet with all their excitement they have made the finest recovery from the war of any of the others. The staid old Britisher that we think does everything just about right, why he is having his toughest sledding right now. Who would think they could ever mishandle their affairs. Yet they will recover, and in five years you wont know em. Its conditions that work em out, its not people worrying about em.

Paraguay, or Uruguay, or some of those Guys, are having a home talent riot But their dont seem to be many of their population mixed up in it, most of their people are busy making a living In Peru some ambitious fellow has got ahold of some amunition, and he is trying to trade it for their White House. But it dont matter much. You take one of those Countries without a Revolution is kinder like us without some hard times to holler about We just got to have it.

Smart Young Lad, This Prince

Prince of Wales is prowling around down there now. He is drumming up some trade for the Empire, and I bet does a fine job of it There is one prospective Monarch that really makes himself useful to his Country. He is the best add any country has, and he is not too high hat to practically admit that that is why he makes the trips He knows we are living in a Commercial and synthetic age, and he has to make the most of it. His samples is his personality, backed by the methodical workmanship of the British craftsman. Course he will play a little Golf, but he will pick out some Guy to play with, (and perhaps let him beat him.) some Bird ahead of some Industry that is in the market for an awful lot of things that England make. So he is a mighty sensible and useful young man

As I write this its just a day or so before that Congress of ours is supposed to go home Now whether they will do it or not, the Lord himself only knows. Course they have the prayers of a Nation being offered up in favor of a home coming for the whole mess. But there has been better ones than this that we couldent jar loose from. I believe the Rascals meant well at this session They really wanted to help the people, but as usual dident know how.

So its not really intention on the Governments part that they dont do better, its ignorance You see every fellow looks at things from his particular part of the Country. He cant see what might be the condition in some other part

Now take this Drouth affair down South. Those people were called Farmers. Well they were farmers, they made what little living they ever got out of the soil, so they are certainly entitled to be called Farmers, but they were not the Farmers that the east and the north have been accustomed to look on as they drive by. Its not the big red barns, the cows, the Pigs, the Chickens, the big fat work horses. During all this hardship, its the Renter Farmer, the "Share Cropper." A man that on a cotton Plantation tends ten acres, that is if he uses one Mule. He is called the One mule cropper. or the two mule cropper. He lives in a little box house, generally two rooms and a lean too. They are eternally in debt to the Land owner who generally owns the store or if he dont the local Merchant. That one share of that one little crop has got to keep them for the whole year. They buy everything they eat. They are going too, the Red Cross and the County Agents are, of making each land owner give them about a half acre to put in a garden, that will help a tremendous lot. There is nothing they can work at during the time they are not putting in or tending their cotton.

It Just "Happened"

Those little few bales of cotton that he gets as his share has to pay his whole previous years Grocery, and other merchandise bill. Now how in the world can he have a cent left. He hasent, he is in debt. Then add a drouth to that, where he dont raise anything, then what happened. The Store man was practically broke along with him. The land owner who also deals just from year to year, he was broke, so picture the condition yourself No work to be had, no food to be bought, no seed to plant.

Now whose fault is it. It aint anybodys fault. If it is, it aint his, he has done the best he knew how He is tending to his business the same as his Father and Grand Father did before him Rich men, educated men, on Wall Street and in all big Businesses were perhaps carrying on their Fathers business in what they had always thought was a safe and sane way, yet look what happened to them. Look what happened to everybody. The smart, the crafty, the schrewd, they all got it, only they had somebody who could help em. These people had nobody, their friends were the same as they were I was raised on a Farm and Ranch combined, was raised where they had Renter Farmers, and I have always conscientiously believed that a poor share crop tenter was the poorest and least provided for man in this or any other Country, and the Cotton renter is

He is drumming up trade for the Empire.

MARCH STORM BOOSTS WHEAT

Corn Shows Gains When Snow-Stalled Trains Curtail Receipts.

By The Associated Press.

CHICAGO March 7—With blizzard conditions at some points, and snow in Nebraska, Kansas, Illinois, Missouri and Indiana, grain prices averaged higher early today. Decreased arrivals of corn in Chicago, 135 cars against 208 a week ago and 273 at this time last year, had a bullish effect. Opening at a shade lower to ¼ cents higher, corn subsequently showed all around gains. Wheat started at ¼ decline to ¼ advance, and afterward scored a general upturn.

Reports of trains stalled by snow gave emphasis to curtailment of receipts of corn. Primary arrivals of corn were 768,000 bushels, compared with 850,000 on the corresponding day last week and 1,232,000 a year back. Some falling off in the volume of domestic marketing of wheat was also apparent, primary receipts totaling but 1,060,000 bushels against 1,075,000 a week ago.

For the first time in a long while, Winnipeg had similar wheat receipts, 214 cars compared with 467 a week previous and 281 on the corresponding day of 1930. Some wheat buying here was based on Winnipeg price rallies, and on word that export purchases of Canadian wheat yesterday aggregated almost 1,000,000 bushels Oats borrowed firmness from wheat and corn.

Packers' buying imparted strength to provisions.

Most of Us Are Not So Bad Off When One Considers Farmers.

just half again poorer than this wheat or Corn renter, so you see what shape he is in.

The man in the City that has to live in the slums with his family, but he gets something every day for his work, he has something to show for it every week, he knows what he is making, he knows what he is spending. He has his little money, he can buy where he can find its the cheapest. This poor renter has to stay with the same merchant for the year even if he is overcharged. Then they tell me some of you haven't raised your Red Cross Quota. Well all I hope is you are never a Renter farmer.

PROTESTS BUS LINE

Bucyrus Files Objection With State Utilities Commission.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., March 7—The city of Bucyrus today filed a protest with the state utilities commission against the granting of a permanent certificate to the Galion-Mansfield Transit Co., to operate a bus line between Galion and Bucyrus. The city feared such a permit might be an obstacle to the restoration of the service on the Cleveland Southwestern railway interurban line, which, the city said, might be undertaken by another company. The traction service was abondoned recently and the utilities commission granted several temporary bus certificates.

The Stars Say—

For Sunday, March 8

SUNDAY'S HOROSCOPE is a very happy and propitious one, judging by the fortuitous force of the ruling planets. There is much of satisfaction and felicity to be found in affairs of church and state, in dealings with superiors and employers, and in avenues of intellect and culture. Writings should flourish

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of splendid progress and achievement, with all literary and kindred pursuits, finances and employment under a benevolent sway. It is a time for pushing to high goals and accomplishments. A child born on this day should be brilliant, versatile, ambitious and should attain to high position and prestige by its own excellent talents and qualities.

• • •

For Monday, March 9

MONDAY'S ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST is for high enterprise and adventure, possibly into new and untried fields. With stability and diligence there may be much advantage and progress attained, but it would be wise to handle the funds with conservatism and the impending change should be calmly considered.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of much activity and many stirring events, but these should be manipulated with calmness and financial conservatism. A child born on this day may be energetic, aggressive, inclined to change and adventure, and may have a rather spectacular and hazardous career.

Investigate Story of Kidnaping and Robbery

By Brush-Moore Leased Wire.

STEUBENVILLE, O., March 7—Police are investigating the story of Gus Caifas, grocer, that five armed men kidnapped him last night and then returned to his store to make him open his safe and yield $250 in cash after which they took him out and stranded him in the countryside.

Kaifas made his way to a farmhouse, he said, and called his wife, who in turn notified police. They found him at the farmhouse.

Kaifas was unnerved by his experience and was able to furnish police with few clues. He knew that the automobile was a big sedan but he was not able to give them any detailed description of his captors.

Beaten by Jail Prisoners and Then Kidnaped After Release.

By The Associated Press.

DALLAS, Tex., March 7—Inside jail or out, there was "a hot time in the old town tonight" for two Communists who sought to explain their doctrines in Dallas.

A jail sentence for staging a street demonstration was imposed several days ago upon C. J. Coder and Lewis Hurst, Communist organizers. They were beaten severely Thursday by prisoners in the city jail when they delivered a harangue on Communism and racial equality, including intermarriage of Negroes and whites.

Yesterday, George Clifton Edwards, Dallas attorney who represented them, reported his clients were picked up by a group of armed motorists upon release from jail. They had not been heard from since. Edwards said he was forced into a motor car and was released later on a road near Dallas, after being warned not to "defend Communists" again. He said he believed Coder and Hurst were taken to some secluded spot and flogged.

"World's Sweetest Carnival" To Be Held in Geauga County

By The Associated Press.

CHARDON, O., March 7—The world's sweetest carnival will be held next month in this village, seat of Geauga county.

It is the Festival of the Maples, known throughout the United States as an institution outstanding and unique as the Apple Blossom show at Winchester, Va., and the great cherry blossom expositions at Benton Harbor, Mich. This diminutive municipalitity which for generations has thrived on prosperity derived from the products of the stately maple trees which dot its quiet streets and city park grows, overnight, into a City of Syrup. Its population, normally but 1,750, is swelled by 25,000 visitors, who throng the booths and the places of display, bowing long and low before the nation's sweet tooth. They bring with them, each April, the spirit of a holiday in Nice, a Mardi Gras in New Orleans and a jousting tournament in medieval England.

The big show lasts but two days, and usually the weather man is in a good humor, turning lose his balmiest spring breezes with abandon. These sweep the Berkshires of Ohio, 700 feet above Lake Erie.

All visitorce receive free dishes of pure Geauga maple syrup. Flapjacks turn cartwheels in restaurant windows, and breakfasts are adventures.

Geauga county is the country of the maple camps. Methods modern and ancient are employed each spring in the golden harvest—and newcomers pause for hours as they watch the various processes demonstrated.

Sister Testifies

Elsie Draves, black-haired double for Arlene, testified her sister had obtained money from their brother, Edward, for a dress a week before last Thanksgiving. The defense had sought to show Kirkland purchased a dress for his sweetheart, Edward Draves substantiated his sister's testimony.

Drs. Joseph Springer of Chicago, and Herman O Seipel, of Valparaiso, testifying for the defense, held the brain wound alone killed Arlene. As the trail hurried to a climax yesterday, the athletic Kirkland narrated to an avid crowd of spectators, largely women, his romance with Miss Draves.

Detailing graphicaly how he met Arlene when she was 15, he told of an intended elopement, and reached the high point of the courtroom drama with the events of the "flaming youth" party, the girl's death and his arrest. Kirkland denied striking her.

Others Await Trial

Four other young men also are accused of Miss Draves' murder, and are awaiting separate trials at Gary.

As a final gesture to send Kirkland to the electric chair, the prosecution planned to put Elsie, Carolyn and Edward Draves, sisters and brother of Arlene, on the stand with the evident intention to refute Kirkland's claim that the girl was his sweetheart and that they intended to be married.

JAPAN SINGS PRAISES OVER NEW PRINCESS

Rejoices, Though Disappointed at Stork's Failure To Bring Crown Prince.

By The Associated Press.

TOKYO, March 7—Japan sang praises today to a new member of the imperial family, born to Emperor Hirohito and Empress Nagako at 12:02 p. m., but Prince Chichibu, the emperor's younger brother, continued to be the heir presumptive of the oldest unbroken royal line in the world.

Birth of the little princess, the fourth daughter born to the imperial couple, was heralded throughout the empire by the national radiocasting system with broadcasting of the national anthem, the Kimigayo.

In Tokyo citizens were appraised of the event by the municipal sirens while the Official Gazette, the government organ, issued one of its rare "extras."

Although the imperial family and the nation were thankful for the safety of the mother and the little princess, who were reported doing well today, a slightly veiled disappointment that the new arrival could not be welcomed as the crown prince, attended the rejoicing. Only male descendants of the sun goddess may occupy the throne.

The tiny princess, shortly after her birth, was honored by the first ceremony of the elaborate and detailed ritual which governs the entrance of a member of the imperial family into the world. The infant was presented a sword nine and one-half inches long, wrapped in white brocade and enclosed in a wooden box, marked with the 16 petalled chrysanthemum of the imperial crest. The sword, a gift of the emperor, is symbolic protection against evil.

Chevalier Given Full Hour Period for Broadcast

BY GILSON WRIGHT

SUNDAY'S radio programs are replete with famous names of stage and screen stars.

Maurice Chevalier, for example, has been given a full hour for his weekly program beginning Sunday night. His broadcast will be heard from 8 to 9 p. m. instead of from 8:30 to 9 p. m., as in the past. The program will come over the WEAF chain.

Billie Burke, once a screen idol, will appear in a radio version of Sir James Barrie's "Rosalind" over the WEAF network at 7:30 p. m., and Irene Bordoni, who hitherto has confined her radio activities to guest appearances, will appear in the first program of a weekly series over the Columbia network at 9 p. m.

Another Sunday feature is a program in which Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes of the United States supreme court will be honored on his ninetieth birthday. The broadcast is scheduled for the Columbia network at 10:30 p. m., and will include Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes as one of the speakers.

• • •

Elisabeth Rethberg, leading dramatic soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will demonstrate, during the Atwater Kent Radio Hour Sunday at 9:15 p. m., how poetry and drama receive their most striking expression in song.

• • •

"An Old Fashioned Garden," the memory-stirring melody that has retained its popularity through the passing years, will be featured on the Davey hour Sunday at 5 p. m., together with "The Doll Dance" which will be played as an organ solo by Chandler Goldthwaite, internationally famous organist.

• • •

Adele Vasa, soprano, will feature the "Italian Street Song" from "Naughty Marietta," while Barbara Maurel, contralto, will adapt her operatic voice to the singing of "The Man I Love," during the "Sweethearts of the Air" program to be broadcast over the Columbia network Sunday from 5:30 to 6 p. m.

• • •

A member of Parliament who is an ex-champion heavyweight of the British Navy and heir to one of the oldest peerages in England, will be the speaker in Columbia's international series Sunday at 12:30 p. m., when Commander the Hon. J. M. Kenworthy is heard from London over a nationwide network.

• • •

The Conclave of Nations series of the Columbia Broadcasting System, in which the ranking diplomatic representatives of nations accredited to Washington have told of their home countries, will end Sunday at 1:30 p. m. with the program honoring Czechoslovakia.

• • •

Johann Strauss' ever popular waltz, "1001 Nights," will be one of the features of the concert by the Detroit Symphony Orchestra during the program Sunday at 9:30 p. m., over the Columbia network.

• • •

"Skyscraper," acclaimed by radio critics as the outstanding radio drama of many months, will, by popular demand, be broadcast a second time over the WEAF network Sunday at 10:15 p. m.

BORROW $46,000

147 World War Veterans Seek Loans on Bonuses.

One hundred and forty-seven World war veterans have filed applications for loans aggregating $46,000 through the local office of the Red Cross, Miss Margaret Dowd estimated today.

Filing of applications was resumed yesterday after the arrival of 300 application blanks from the regional offices in Cleveland.

In the consignment of application blanks were 300 forms which probably will supply the local chapter adequately.

MAPLE SYRUP HERE AT $2.50 GALLON

Neighboring Counties Provide Supply for Marion Consumption.

Egg prices moved up two cents this week to land at a price range of 21 to 27 cents a dozen. Prices moved upward when eggs became more scarce.

One of the features of the week was the arrival of maple syrup which is now retailing at $2.20 to $2.50 a gallon. Most of the supply comes from neighboring counties.

New cabbage was marketed this week at eight and 10 cents a pound. California orange quotations moved slightly upward but not enough to change materially the retail prices.

Strawberries today are quoted at 25 to 30 cents a pint, five cents a pint lower than opening figures of the season two weeks ago.

Oysters continue to sell at 70 to 80 cents a quart, although the supply is low and only a few of the larger grocers are handling them.

CHARGE DISMISSED

A charge of non-support of parent brought against Mrs Goldie Britton, 31, of Marion R. F. D. No 3, was dismissed in municipal court yesterday by Judge William R. Martin. The action was brought by Anna Gormley, charging Mrs Britton failed to provide for her mother, 60.

What Is A Christian?

A SERMONETTE

BY REV. IRVIN KAUFFMAN

Pastor of Greenwood Evangelical Church

THE commonly accepted definition of a Christian is this: "A Christian is a follower of Christ." For the sake of discussion we will accept this definition and add further that the more closely he follows the more Christian does he become.

Both this definition and statement implies that in the life of a real follower of Jesus, all the virtues that were common to Him will be reproduced. In other words, if we are an out and out follower of Him we shall be like Him in character and in conduct.

What were some of the outstanding virtues that marked the life of our Lord as He lived it here among men? There were many but perhaps we can mention a few that will really embody them all. We will say for instance, that he was humble, patient, unselfish and upright. There are the virtues that marked His life and these are the virtues that we have a right to expect in the life of every person who really follows Him

But to what degree must these virtues be present in the life of a man before we can call him a Christian? Shall we demand perfection? If we do, and we ourselves are permitted to judge, every person will eventually be eliminated. For if we were to become associated with the godliest person on earth, in perhaps less than a week, we would come to see faults in him, either real or fancied, and if perfection be our standard of judgment we would have to say, "He is not a Christian."

Again, if we are not to demand perfection how much allowance are we to make for a man's imperfections before we refuse to call him a Christian"

We are cornered no matter which way we turn because our definition is faulty. Let us see what the Bible has to say on the matter. We will select for our purpose, John 1:12—"But as many as received Him to them gave He power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on His name." It is evident that from this and from many other scriptures that a Christian is one who receives the Lord Jesus Christ as his saviour

A great many people, influenced by the thought embodied in our first definition, will say, "I'll never call myself a Christian because to do so is to set myself up as an example of goodness." Is that true? Or isn't it a fact that the very opposite is the case? What did Jesus say we must do as a means of becoming a Christian? Did He say that in order to become a Christian we must declare our goodness? No. He said we must confess our sins. A man who becomes a Christian in this sense of the word declares himself a moral failure. He is bankrupt as far as goodness is concerned. He has nothing with which to pay his debt to God. He therefore puts the whole case over into the hands of Jesus Christ, who in turn pays all his debts, assumes absolute responsibility for him and sees him safely on his way to heaven. He becomes his protector, his guardian and his Saviour. A Christian, therefore, is a sinner who seeing himself guilty and condemned, has taken refuge under the atonement made by the blood of Jesus Christ, where he remains a pensioner of the grace of God forever.

There is no room for boasting here. A man who admits that he needs a guardian is not paying himself a compliment, and while he may praise the merits of his guardian, he will never boast of himself unless he is hopelessly foolish. When Jesus fully possesses the Christian all the virtues mentioned earlier becomes possible in his experience. But even then he will have nothing of which to boast for the virtues with all be Christ's and not his own.

VILLAGE FIGHTS PHONE LOSS

Bellefontaine Company Would Move Exchange to Mt. Victory.

Special to The Star.

KENTON, March 7—The little village of Ridgeway, south of here, today was up in arms over the announced intention of the United Telephone Co. of Bellefontaine to remove its exchange from Ridgeway to Mt. Victory.

If the exchange, which numbers 147 telephones in its district, is removed there is a possibility that an expired franchise with the United Telephone Co. will not be renewed and that the Kenton Telephone Co. will go into the community, erecting its own lines and installing its own system of telephones.

At the present time, with a cable already as far as the crossroads north of Ridgeway and employes working to complete the connection between there and Mt. Victory, officials of the Bellefontaine company are considering a petition from 146 patrons in the Ridgeway system. The petition requests the company to allow its exchange to remain in Ridgeway.

Telephone users of the Ridgeway community point out that a franchise allowed the United Telephone Co. expired in 1923 and has not been renewed. If the exchange is taken from the village to Mt. Victory, three miles away, patrons will make every effort to interest the Kenton concern, it was said.

Officials of the United Telephone Co. point to the expense of retaining three girls as operators and say that the receipts, totaling $200.50 plus toll calls monthly, are not sufficient to warrant them keeping an exchange in the village.

About the First Urgent Details

By The Schaffner-Queen Co.

When the need arises, do not delay in calling the funeral director. Select a director of absolute reliability and infallible integrity, and he will be of the utmost helpfulness.

He will attend to every detail requiring immediate attention and be of the greatest assistance in all preliminary arrangements.

He sees that a physician's certificate is filed, and secures the burial permit. He also frequently supervises the publishing of the newspaper notices.

Members of the immediate family, who are not present, should be notified at once by telephone or telegraph. Word is also sent to intimate friends, and the funeral arrangements are made known to the officiating clergyman.

Attention may then be given to details less imperatively urgent.

Daily Proverb—"While the world laats fashion will lead it by the nose."

Out of 24,000 bills introduced in the seventy-first congress, something more than 1,300 became laws, an average of about .054 per cent. Let us be grateful that the percentage isn't any higher than it is.

Mayor Walker says he is shocked by the police frame-up charges developed in the Seabury investigation. James may take it that he hasn't anything on the remainder of the country's citizenship.

From Detroit comes word that the automobile business there has been stimulated by the loans to World war veterans. Well, the money is theirs, and nobody imagined that they would pay interest on it for the purpose of hoarding it.

Senator Reed Smoot, of Utah, sees an economic recovery which will extend so steadily that it will be unnecessary for congress to increase taxes at the coming session. As an A No. 1, blown-in-the-bottle optimist we'll hand it to the head of the senate finance committee as being in a class by himself. More power to him!

The Moscow government has discovered a couple of additional plots against the soviets. Were there really as many plots against it as claimed, it is hardly likely there would be a Moscow government. The bolsheviki are overplaying the plot business.

The scientists of the National Research council hold that all estimates of the age of the earth are incorrect save that based on the disintegration of radio-active elements which shows it to be about 1,852,000,000 years. Of course this estimate may be off a million years or such a matter, but, when all is said what are a few millions of years between scientific friends?

Short six dollars in his account as treasurer of his class book committee and needing $10 more for his class pictures, a high school honor student of Haverhill, Massachusetts, has confessed to beating up a widow with a hammer when she discovered him robbing her home. Can it be possible that the side issues of school life are putting more of a financial burden on students than they should be asked to bear?

The British Labor government, through Chancellor of the Exchequer Snowden, has announced that it has no intention of changing the second verse of "God Save the King," in which, alluding to Britain's "enemies," there are such phrases as "confound their politics, frustrate their knavish tricks." However, it is hardly probable that the stand taken by the British government will estop some of our internationalists from championing changes in "The Star-Spangled Banner" to preclude giving offense to the British.

Exploding Old Adages.

Cornell university's department of psychology is engaged in exploding a lot of adages whose one claim to reverence is their extreme age. It has put the skiddoo sign on such old ones as "Practice makes perfect," "Early to bed and early to rise," "You can't teach an old dog new tricks" and many others which have come down the corridors of time.

Professor J. G. Jenkins, experimental psychologist at Cornell, says that people trust so implicity to these old adages as at times to work real harm. Experiment, he says, has demonstrated that there is absolutely nothing in them. Practice, he says, doesn't make perfect. It's not the amount of practice, but the quality which counts. Were it the former, a big percentage of our misfits would be eliminated from that classification. "The poor dancer and the dub golfer," he goes on to say, "after years of patient effort, become expert only in making the atrocious steps and shots they have practiced." Whether "early to bed and early to rise" tends toward health, wealth and wisdom depends largely on whether one gets refreshing sleep in the early hours of the night or the early hours of the morning. Some attain the greater degree of their rest at one time and some at another.

And the old one about the inability to teach an old dog new tricks is all to the bad, the professor asserts. It has been demonstrated that one well beyond middle age can acquire a given skill almost as readily as at any time in earlier life.

The attack on the old adages is not made, it is explained, to show that all the old proverbs are false, but rather to show that to follow them until they have been verified by experiment is not safe, and that such experimentation is justified that vicious proverbs and adages may be discarded for the good of society, for many of them which may hold true in one case may prove utterly untrue in another. In another way of putting it—we, not the professor, are using this old one—what may be one man's pudding may prove another man's poison.

That "Progressive" Campaign.

Under the leadership of their patron saint of discord, Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, the members of the senate who label themselves "Progressives," but who may more accurately be designated renegade Republicans, have launched a campaign with the assistance of their Democratic allies in radicalism to shape up, as they claim, the issues of the 1932 presidential campaign. Washington has been selected as the scene, and March 11 and 12 as the dates for the preliminary outbursts of discontent.

Five general topics, they have announced, are listed for round table discussion. They are: unemployment and industrial stabilization, public utilities, agriculture, the tariff and "return to representative government."

As agriculture is separately listed, we assume that the industrial stabilization to which reference is made is that of mechanical industry. One must fairly shudder at the thought of what might be the fate of industry stabilized by these disciples of radicalism. One can fairly hear the outcries for government ownership or, if not that, then for government management. But that reference to "return to representative government," we are free to say, came as a surprise. If Mr. Norris or any of his fellow-radicals has the slightest sense of humor, there must have been a chuckle or two over a radical advocacy of a return to representative government. Why the senate radicals have been fighting representative government during every session of the seventy-first congress. They don't want representative government. They want minority government, and, sad to say, by their domineering and bulldozing tactics they forced minority government upon the country very largely throughout the congress.

But what they want more than anything else is opportunity to talk. This want will in large part explain their insistence on a special session. As some one has said, they wanted the extra session that they might continue the use of congress "as a sounding board." Chagrined by their failure to inflict an extra session upon the country, during which they might indulge their propensity to orate and "investigate," they have planned their campaign as a substitute.

However, they will labor under one handicap which does not obtain when they speak in the houses of congress. Congressional immunity will not be enjoyed by them should they attempt to blacken good names and assassinate reputations.

It has been developed that the caviar fraud worked on Tientsin merchants was manipulated by two Russians, who, without the knowledge of their firm in Shanghai, mixed mud with the so-called delicacy, and shipped it as caviar to Tienstin. It's very possible that some people may be inclined to figure that the treatment of the Russians couldn't have greatly harmed the product and may have improved its edibility.

Why the Dole Is Dreaded.

Thanks to repeated hammering home of the idea, America has a wholesome dread of the dole. During the recent controversy between the administration and congress over the better method of providing relief for drought-affected regions, the dread thus established was used advantageously many times. The administration's views prevailed; direct relief was not granted, in theory at least.

Why this dread of the dole?

Because, added to the testimonials of many intelligent Americans who have witnessed first hand the operation of the dole system, particularly in England, are such occasional offerings of evidence as the most recent one of Lord Decies, Irish peer, known as one of the most courageous antagonists of the English dole system. He characterized it upon his arrival in America this week as "an unqualified, cantankerous growth." It is paralyzing England, he charged openly.

Adding such bitter descriptions of the dole to other descriptions more kindly in intent, notably those of Margaret Bondfield and others, who have attempted, vainly insofar as the general American observer is concerned, to show what the dole is designed to do, a complete picture of failure is presented. America will do wisely to retain its mortal dread of anything even remotely resembling the dole system until the picture has been lightened in some degree by success somewhere in the world. And that time is a very long way off.

Life is becoming awfully complicated up in Chicago. Peaceful citizens are not only being held up and robbed of their valuable, but of their trousers as well.

Scientists of the University of Illinois, following long research in the university hospital, have decided that headaches are peculiar to the intelligensia and are usually induced by fast living and irregular habits. It looks like a deliberate attempt to popularize headaches.

John J. Raskob has been sued in the District of Columbia supreme court for $50,600 damages by a resident of Washington who claims that the Democratic chairman's car collided with his machine, last Monday, causing damages to the plaintiff and his car in that amount. The machine of the plaintiff must have been a mighty fancy one, for it's simply impossible to vision a man injured anything like $50,600 worth on Monday in condition to institute a damage proceeding the following Thursday.

Blood-poisoning, which resulted from the scratch of a thorn, caused the death of a hale and hearty farmer near Galesburg, Illinois, this week. One can not be too careful regarding the smallest injury. To give it immediate attention is the only safe way.

Chairman Britten, of the house naval affairs committee, charges that the failure of further naval construction authorization at the present session was due to the domination of congress by "Socialists and Bolsheviks, Communists and Pacificists of butterfly ideals," and he sees this country lose out to Great Britain and Japan, as a result of the failure, in the naval parley of 1935. Even admitting some prejudice in favor of naval construction on the part of Chairman Britten, isn't what he has said absolutely in line with the program of these different elements unfriendly to the government?

ONE AT A TIME!

Editorial Opinion.

MARCH INAUGURATIONS.

It is more or less of a custom here in Washington on the 4th day of any March except that which is by law scheduled for the presidential induction into office to consider what sort of an "inauguration day" it would make. For example, this day would be almost ideal for the great national ceremonial. The skies are clear, the atmosphere is mild, not warm enough to be uncomfortable nor cold enough to be a menace to those who are out of doors. It is a far better "inauguration day" than many that have been actually marked on the calendar as the day of the great political change.

Time was when a demand was voiced throughout the country for a change of the date of the presidential inauguration to the last Thursday in April, selected as most nearly corresponing to the day George Washington took the oath of office the first time and as most assuredly clement. A joint resolution proposing a constitutional amendment to that effect all but passed congress, being defeated in the house of representatives by the very narrowest possible margin on the two-thirds basis. But for that slender chance it would probably have gone through both houses and been ratified by the states.

After that denial of amendment the movement for a revision of the national calendar in another direction began to take form. The primary purpose of this proposed change was to eliminate the so-called "lame duck" session of congress, the shifting of the presidential induction into office from March to January being merely incidental to this major alteration in the time plan of federal government. The other day that constitutional admendment, approved by senate, failed in the house for lack of time to effect agreement between the houses on certain points of difference.

The chances are altogether in favor of the substitution of January instead of April for the inauguration, when the change is finally effected. That there will be such a change is little doubted. The sentiment favorable to the elimination of the "lame duck" session steadily is growing stronger. It is quite within the range of probability that the amendment will be voted by the next congress and submitted to the states in season for ratification to affect the seventy-fourth congress and the inauguration of 1937. It is practically certain that there will be one more March inauguration, that of 1933, and it is to be hoped that the day will be as agreeable as this present one.—Washington Star, March 4.

EYE COLOR AND PARENTAGE.

The refusal of Judge Feinburg in Chicago to consider the color of a child's eyes a legal test of parentage was soundly sensible. The Mendelian theory has been tried out sufficiently to convince the world that is is fundamentally correct, but in its practical application to animal heredity it encounters many complicated conditions which have a profoundly modifying effect upon the working of the simple basic principle. So that an attempt to assert dogmatically and finally that a certain result must come from certain apparent causes, is sometimes rather presumptuous.

There is a general acceptance of the dictum that in man brown eyes are recessive, and are not found in children of two blue-eyed parents, even though those parents may have had brown-eyed parents themselves. But the ways of nature are various and mysterious; and to our limited human knowledge their workings sometimes seem even capricious. And there are rules which appear to present sportive exceptions. Moreover, as one expert in Chicago pointed out, it is not always possible for a casual observer to be sure whether an eye has brown pigmentation in it, or is actually blue. Probably every person who closely observes eyes has at some time seen one apparently azure, which on close examination has shown brown streaks or spots.—Detroit Free Press.

Child May Outgrow Defects.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Every baby born into this world has traveled a tortuous and hazardous route. The wonder is that the vast percentage of babies arrive in safety. Considering the dangers and possible disasters, it is greatly to the credit of nature that few accidents occur.

One of the most serious accidents happening at birth is some sort of an injury that causes bleeding within the skull of the infant. The soft tissues of the brain are pressed upon by the clotted blood and trouble follows.

Nothing is more distressing to a young mother than to have a prolonged labor. I thank God that advances in obstetrical science have lessened the pains and miseries of motherhood. I pray that even greater progress may speedily come.

But this experience is not harmful to the mother alone. The babe may suffer in consequence. Pressure upon the tender bones may produce trouble to the precious tissues within the head.

It can not be determined immediately upon birth whether the brain is damaged or not. There may be a long period before anything abnormal is discovered. A full year may pass before the mother is convinced the baby does not use a hand or a foot as it should.

After a while it is noted that the baby has no expression in the face. Perhaps the time when speech should be possible has been long passed before the reason for the delay in talking is discovered.

It is fascinating to study the development of a child. With every passing day the babe learns something new. Almost from birth the youngster makes progress in the use of the eye and ear. A tiny baby will listen for the mother's movements.

By self-education the infant learns to use the hands and fingers. Movements which were uncertain and uncontrolled at birth, become certain and definite.

But, dear mother, I am not saying all these things to distress you. There is a note of cheer in this message.

Even though the child may have stiff limbs, a face without expression, inability to speak, constant dribbling from the mouth, meaningless cries and laughs, you need not worry. It is amazing how these defects melt away. In later childhood they will disappear and the child will be normal in every respect.

The patient and persistent efforts made by the infant itself have a wonderful way of overcoming the temporary defects. With full growth the child becomes perfect. Talk with your doctor if you are worried.

ANSWERS TO HEALTH QUERIES

L.M.R. Q—What causes me to feel tired and weak all the time?

A—Have an examination to locate the cause.

• • •

MRS. E.B. Q—What can I do to stop my husband from drinking?

A—If he will not use his will power then prolonged seclusion in a suitable institution is the only alternative.

• • •

W.J.H. Q—What do you advise for moles?

A—Consult a skin specialist about having them removed.

• • •

K.N. Q—What is the cause of dizziness?

A—Dizziness may be due to a circulatory disturbance, to an eye or ear condition, or to some intestinal disturbance. It would be wise to have your doctor give you an examination in order to determine the exact cause.

• • •

MRS. G.C.C. Q—After pulling hairs from the face and arms—will camphor tend to kill the root of the hair?

A—It may. Fresh peroxide of hydrogen, frequently applied, will bleach the hair, this making it less conspicuous and, it is contested by some, peroxide will retard the hair growth.

• • •

L.J.M. Q—How can I get rid of a mole on my neck?

A—I would advise you to consult a skin specialist and have the mole removed.

2—What can be done for watering eyes?

2—It may be that your eye muscles are not well balanced. A thorough test of the eyes will cover the muscles as well as the sight. An eye wash of warm boracic acid will give temporary relief.

How Science Tutors Mankind.

BY ARCHIBALD HENDERSON.

The futurists of today, the philosophers who are constantly charting the graph of racial development, are raising vital questions regarding the relation between science and progress. It will scarcely be contended by any one that there is not a connection, indeed a vital and intimate connection, between science and racial advance. The public of today is displaying as much interest in the great scientist as in the great liberator, or soldier, or statesman. The radio enables the scientist to address directly a world audience, and to discuss the latest and most spectacular discoveries from a large and philosophic standpoint.

Science, whether as practiced in the study or in the laboratory, has a pronounced influence on the material development of civilization. Edison, an experimental investigator, may hit upon laws of natural phenomena which enable him to perfect inventions affecting many millions of people and revolutionizing the mode of living of an entire generation. Clerk-Maxwell in the quiet of his study may develop physical principles in the shape of mathematical formulas which are later translated into practical inventions by Hertz, Branly and Marconi.

There is, however, even a limit to the scope of material invention. All inventions are merely natural laws translated into would-be beneficial action. There is a limit to the forces of nature, and to the number of laws which they obey. In consequence there is a limit to the possibilities of material invention. Progress, judged from purely material considerations, can not go on indefinitely. It is reasonable to suppose that, after the passage of some very great length of time, material progress, except in minor details, will virtually have completed itself.

We must look then in other directions for some of the other influences exerted upon humanity by science. Certain it is that science gives beneficial employment and directive impulse to human intelligence. Moreover, science as we know it today serves as a great stimulant to the imaginative faculties of mankind. Great new ideas, such as those put forward by Einstein, Planck, Bohr, Millikan, Schroedinger, for example, open up new vistas of thought and suggest countless new avenues for man's future investigation.

An important influence upon the development of the mass consciousness of the race is found in the great new group of studies, known as the social sciences. People, judged collectively, have developed a sense of hygiene; they have become more charitable in their instincts and more humane in their actions. Certainly the race as a whole has improved in moral outlook.

Science is an outlet for the higher play instinct of man. Science and art run parallel in this respect. The painter, the sculptor, the architect, the inventor, the pure scientist—each is releasing vital creative instincts in the interest of a more intelligent philosophy, a better world, a higher and more beautiful way of life. — Copyright, 1931, International Feature Service, Inc.

July 4 Celebration in 1826.

BY J. H. GALBRAITH.

A copy of the published report of the committee on arrangements for the observance of the fiftieth anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence, to be held at Cincinnati, July 4, 1826, shows that it was an unusual celebration of Independence day in several respects. They had secured a man who was later to be the president of the United States as the orator, and a former governor of the state and a veteran of the Revolutionary war—the only revolutionary soldier who ever held executive authority in this state—to read the declaration on that occasion, Othniel Looker.

The orator was "William Henry Harrison, Jr. Esq.," as he was referred to in the report. The hero of Tippecanoe and the Thames was living quietly on his farm at North Bend then, and for some reason his military title was not attached to his name, as used. Looker was quite old, and after being defeated to election of office by Thomas Worthington, had taught school and acted as clerk of court at Cincinnati. Later he removed to Indiana, where he died.

There must have been no small number of veterans of the revolution living in Cincinnati at this time, for the committee set apart a position in the procession for them. The military organizations that had signified their intention to march in the parade were asked to send delegates to the Dennison hotel on the 27 of June to select their places in the procession. The father of Governor William Dennison was probably the proprietor of this hotel.

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. McINTYRE.

New York, March 7—Furniture to me has always been just something else from Grand Rapids until I launched my recent adventure in house-keeping. A piano, too, was a what-not under which you often found "the life of the party," feet up, when time to go home.

When I lived in hotels—regards, messieurs les proprietors!—I thought nothing of letting a cigaret burn to the hilt on top of a glassy dressing table top. If some one playfully carved their initials on the arm of a chair that was too bad, and isn't Noel Coward amusing this season?

But all of a sudden I became "furniture conscious." When any one starts fidgeting about in one of my chairs I adroitly jockey conversation around to the subject of chair-squirming and what havoc it wreaks. I watch a cigaret from time it is lit until snuffed out.

And to make me really mad all a visitor has to do is to start tilting back in our spindly-legged chair. Volumes could be written on the horrors of chair-tilting. When you see some one barging along with one hip higher than the other you can be certain there goes a chair tilter. He tilted once too often.

For years I breezed by furniture windows without a passing peek. But any day I expect to be arrested for loitering in front of one of them. A Heppelwhite has the fascination of a Lorelei, a Sheraton bulges my eyes and a Chippendale gives me the giddiness of being swung in a swing.

Indeed, I have reached the stage of fingering furniture. And when you become a furniture fingerer there is little to do but snap on the handcuffs. The feel of wood becomes fascinating and whenever you see something that has a different grain you can't go on until you finger it.

My contacts with wood heretofore have been encompassed in chopping kindling for grandma and writing choice poems on pine walls hither and yon. But today I can tell bird's-eye maple from dull mahogany as quick as that. The veteran woodsman for Park avenue!

• • •

And as for auction sales I romp to them with the dash of a Tiller girl. And just as radiant. If I don't come away with bric-a-brac or at least a knicknack I don't feel esthetically happy. The last visit I brought home a hall hat rack of elk horns and learned hatracks went out with bicycles. It came to me with a start that that's what has been missing in my life all these years—hatracks.

• • •

Most auction rooms have superior British persons as salesmen. You know! As Lou Holz says, toodleoo, cheerio and shove off! That sort. I have flirted for some time with a few yards of Gobelin tapestry. This salesman with the eye of a haddock and the face of a jolly old teak has been insisting it would be the proper buzz to hang it up in the music room. The other day I outbid six—probably house players—and got it. But I utterly fooled old whizzie-whazzle. We have no music room. Just a piano in the parlor.

• • •

Despite that most of us only know what money is by heresay, auctioneers can always scare up a sale these bleak days. So far no one has sold me a mantle throw, but that is the only thing they missed.

• • •

My household furnishings have stirred up numerous sarcasms by friends. Today I showed a gloomy visitor some recent useless purchases just unpacked. "You know," he said accusingly, "that we are on the brink of a revolution." I hadn't heard directly. I thought it was all just newspaper talk. Any way when it comes I'll have the house all fixed up for it.

• • •

One of my purchases was an antique—an old time—a second while I skim through the dictionary—glockenspiel. In one of my moronic outbursts I thought it would be perfectly dandy as a dinner gong. My wife looked at it, sniffed and walked away. "Relax!" I cried. "This is to summon us to the table." For two days she has tried to tell people of it. "He has bought something, ho, ho, ho"—and tears stream down her face—"to summon him to, ha, ha, ha"—and she goes off into another giggle. You get the idea she thinks that what I need is not something to get me to the table but dynamite to get me away from it.—Copyright, 1931, McNaught Syndicate, Inc.

Not Necessarily.

Down in New York an author of a book on "culture" says that American women are progressing faster culturally than men are. Well, must we all get alarmed about that, too?—Detroit Free Press.

A Washington Daybook.

BY HERBERT PLUMMER.

Washington, March 7—Departure from the capital of Sylvino Gurgel do Amaral, since 1925 Brazil's ambassador to Washington, removes from the diplomatic corps of the capital one of its most interesting figures.

He goes to Japan as his country's ambassador there, the seventh world capital where he has presided over Brazil's diplomatic establishment. Paraguay, Holland, Germany, Peru, Chile and the United States know this big, pleasant, handsome diplomat.

Russia, Spain, Uruguay and Great Britain knew him before he was minister and ambassador in his own right.

In Washington under do Amaral's regime, the handsome brick mansion on Eighteenth street which houses the Brazilian embassy occupied a position of prominence in the social and official life of the capital.

The ambassador's reputation as a host was well known. His ability as a diplomat was generally recognized.

When the recent revolution flared up in Brazil, do Amaral's embassy was the center of attention.

• • •

Those were busy days, and trying ones for the jovial Brazilian. At any time one could find him in the chancery on the third floor, wearing a troubled expression as he walked excitedly from one room to the other, issuing instructions to clerks, stenographers and various attaches.

"The embassy is in mourning," he would say, "until this disagreement in the Brazilian family is adjusted."

And the embassy was in mourning. One sensed that fact from the time one arrived until one departed. Even the liveried butler who opened the door and conducted visitors to the ambassador wore a solemn expression.

All social engagements were canceled, and no new ones made until the atmosphere cleared. The ambassador didn't even have time for his favorite cat—and he is among the capital's most enthusiastic feline fanciers.

His whole time was occupied with affairs of state. His constant lament was that there were only twenty-four hours in the day in which to attend to the many details.

• • •

Do Amaral is considered one of his country's outstanding diplomats. For more than thirty-four years he has made diplomacy his career and has been given the most important posts his country could offer.

It was while he was in Germany during the war days that he achieved much of his fame as a diplomat. The international situation had reached its most crucial stage, a stage in which Brazil could with difficulty maintain her neutral status in the face of the conflict then raging in Europe.

Do Amaral was in a delicate and extremely responsible position. It was on the basis of his report and opinion that Brazil finally severed relations with the German empire and entered the war on the side of the allies.

MAYOR INVESTIGATES DR. MATTOX CHARGE

Finds Veteran Was Not Refused Coal When Child Became Ill.

Investigation of the charge of Dr. S. W. Mattox that a World war veteran had been refused coal to keep a sick child warm has revealed that the man was not refused coal but was referred to another welfare agency which had been caring for his needs at that time, Mayor L. Don Jones said today.

The veteran had obtained several grocery orders from the Red Cross, and was again referred to that agency when he asked for coal in order to avoid duplication of effort on the part of the city's welfare workers, Mayor Jones said.

Dr. Mattox brought the charge against C. M. Tobin, poor relief commissioner in a meeting of the board of health Wednesday, asserting that the veteran, one of his patients, had been refused coal by Tobin.

Investigating the charge yesterday, Tobin reported the man had not complained of his treatment when he asked for coal. The home was partially heated with gas, Tobin found.

Unofficial estimates have placed the coal in the South American fields at 250,000,000,000 tons.

ELISSA LANDI IN "BODY AND SOUL"; IS EUROPEAN STAR

Picture with War Story Theme Opens at Palace Sunday.

"BODY AND SOUL," Fox Movietone drama which opens Sunday at the Palace for a two-day run, will serve to introduce Elissa Landi, beautiful European star, to the American screen public.

No actress from abroad has ever come to this country acclaimed in the flattering terms accorded Miss Landi. New York critics indorsed her performance in the Broadway stage production, "A Farewell to Arms."

The story tells of an American flying ace whose sweetheart is accused of being a spy. How he becomes involved in the accusation and then clears himself and the girl of the charge furnishes the plot.

Charles Farrell has the starring role, while others in the cast include Humphrey Bogart, Myrna Loy, Donald Dillaway and Craufurd Kent.

The Palace's policy of Sunday and Monday vaudeville brings three acts to the local stage. Vera Spriggs & Co., aerial butterflies, opens this part of the program, while Jack and Reta LaPearl appear in a bit of comedy. The closing act, "Five Beaus and a Belle," is announced as a "melange of music, song and dance."

JOE AND WINNIE COMING TO OHIO

Those who have laughed themselves into an apoplectic state at the antics of Winnie Lightner and Joe E. Brown in previous pictures will have a conception of what to expect in "Sit Tight," their latest talkie which comes to the Ohio Sunday for a four-day run. It is produced by Warner Bros. and Vitaphone.

The two are partners in a fake health institute, Winnie being "Dr." O'Neil, the owner, and Brown playing the part of Jojo, the braggart aide. The rest of the cast includes Claudia Dell, Paul Gregory, Lotti Loder, Hobart Bosworth, Frank Hagney and Snitz Edwards.

In addition to the laugh-provoking efforts of Winnie and Joe, there is a love story woven into the picture with Miss Dell and Gregory handling this element. Miss Dell is Sally Dunlap, a wealthy girl who loves Tom Weston, which part is played by Gregory.

Dr. O'Neil induces Weston to train for a wrestling championship and Sally, infuriated, hires a tough to whip him. Sally's father tries to induce him to give up the game and failing, has him kidnaped and placed aboard the Florida-bound family yacht.

This is the beginning of a series of hilarious complications which keep the tempo of the comedy at high speed.

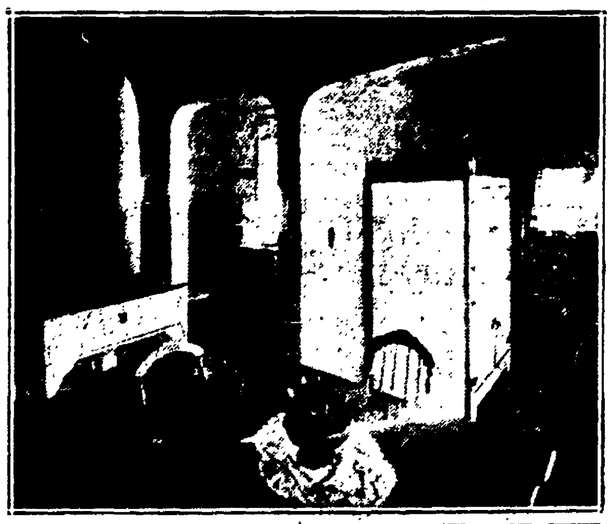
HERE IS MODERN ELECTRIC KITCHEN



MODERN RANGE ENDS 'SLAVERY'

History of Cookery Traced from Open Fire to Automatic Electric.

Since we must eat to live, our greatest interest has always been food. Since the day way back yonder when our ancestors first began cooking their food the job has been largely left to wives and mothers.

We men have always figured that our responsibility ended with our "bringing home the bacon," as they say. Our wives and our mothers have been expected to convert the raw materials into the finished product.

But cooking methods improved very slowly.

Our great-grandmothers blistered their faces before the open fireplaces before coal and wood stoves were common.

And then, a generation later, their daughters were slaves to the hungry, fuel eating, back breaking "cook stove" that made kitchens too hot in summer and that failed to keep them warm in winter. And they cooked the cook.

Then came the flame type stove, familiar to this generation. It was a great improvement—but it still left much to be desired.

It smoked pots and pans causing endless scouring. It left a greasy, sooty coating on walls and wood work. It had to be watched constantly or food came out underdone or over-done.

The flame type stove had a lot of things to recommend it, but then the acetylene light was better than the coal oil lamp.

About 25 years ago the owner of a small electric light plant in North Dakota, seeing how rapidly his list of light customers was growing, began to figure on methods of using this wonderful new thing called electricity for something more than lighting stores and homes at night.

And, as a result of his speculation and experiment, there grew and developed—an idea.

As this idea was expanded and perfected, the first electric range—the Hughes—came into being.

It was simply constructed—crude. It was slow and it was costly to operate. But it was the most modern thing known to the science of cookery—it was the first electric range.

That was almost a quarter of a century ago. The airplane was a dangerous toy. The automobile was known as a "horseless carriage." Moving pictures and "gramophones" were novelties. Electric refrigeration for the home and the wireless were unthought of and television had not been suggested by the wildest dreamer.

During this 25 year-period, while the phonograph, the moving picture, the airplane, the electric refrigerator and the radio were slowly developing and improving and one by one being accepted as a part of our every day life, the Hughes Electric Range underwent a long and thorough process of improvement and refinement.

Electrical wizards employed by the world's greatest electrical manufacturing organization fostered the growth of this "ugly duckling." Their genius and their years of tireless work and experiment wrought wonders in the gradual development of the Hughes idea. Hundreds of thousands of dollars were spent to make the electric range practical—safe—easy to operate and economical.

The result of this concentration of the brain power of America's greatest electrical engineers—this vast expenditure of money—this quarter of a century of slow but certain development and perfection—is the modern Hotpoint automatic electric range.

Electric Equipment in Kitchen Is Economical

Marion Woman Finds Modern Devices Make Cooking Pleasure; Smoke, Odors and Soot Absent with New Range; Saves Considerable Work.

The above kitchen in the home of Mrs. Fred Haybeck of 708 South Prospect street is completely modernized with electrical equipment. This consists of an electric range, an electric refrigerator, "Kitchen-Aid" toaster, egg cooker, ironer, griddle, percolator, iron, waffle iron, electric portable heater and an electric kitchen clock.

The story of Mrs. Haybeck is one of complete satisfaction. The kitchen is planned to minimize effort—every form of old time kitchen drudgery has been eliminated. One glance discloses cleanliness and convenience.

Mrs. Haybeck says, "I feel that my range is the finest thing I have ever had. Until one actually has had the experience of cooking electrically it is impossible for them to realize what a joy it is. I save in every way—time, work, food costs and fuel costs. Don't let anyone tell you the electric range is costly to operate because on the contrary we know it is not. But most of all is the cleanliness, no soot, no smoke, no steam, no odors and no blackened sooty pots or pans to clean."

New Window Pulley Designed for Homes

So often the architecture of a house undergoing modernizing is improved by the changing and addition of windows. It might be well if you are having that done, to take note of the pulley and cord equipment. Much improvement has been made on the old-fashioned sash pulley. A new and efficient pulley is to be had which costs no more than the ordinary kind but which offers much more convenience and economy in its use. Whether cord or chain is used, the housing construction assures no jamming cord of weight; the cord being guided correctly over the wheel can not fray out; either cord or chain are easily threaded over the pulley and finally the whole thing can be painted without gumming the wheel.

In a territory slightly larger than Texas Turkey has a population estimated at 11,000,000.

COOKING RATES ARE LOW HERE

Story of Electricity in Kitchen One of Domestic Science's Bright Spots.

The story of electric cookery is one of the brightest chapters in the history of domestic science. The great genius and extensive research laboratories of the General Electric Co. should be given full credit in this development.

As this research progressed and public interest increased the electric light and power industry established new lower rates to provide for more economical costs to be applied to cooking and heating by electricity.

We are fortunate here in Marion in that we have a low cooking rate. It may be of interest to know that our local rate is lower than the average in 43 states.

In the face of the general depression, sales of electric ranges in Marion last year exceeded those of the previous 10 years combined. Briefly, that is the story of the modern electric range throughout the country.

FOREST AROMA

Pine in Wall Plaster Obtains Unique Effect.

There is hardly anyone who doesn't enjoy the bracing odor of pine needles, bringing back as it usualy does some pleasant memory of a crackling camp-fire, a deep, green path in the woods or a canoe gliding over a lake in the pines. Most of us have painstakingly gathered pine needles in bags to bring home with us some tangible memory of days pleasantly and healthfully spent in the woods.

Now in your own home you can put on a colorful fragrant plaster that suggests in both looks and aroma those same woods. Its color is the soft, dull, green of the pine itself and the material is blended with pine needles, pine wood and oils which give it the fragrance of pine. Sunrooms, sleeping porches, closets, dens and recreation rooms are particularly pleasing done in the new plaster compound.

TAGES OF ELECTRIC APPLIANCES FOR HOME

Here Changed To Wright Transfer and Storage Co.

PLANT AND EQUIPMENT OF FIRM

Local Concern Started By M. L. Paddock in 1889

George A. Wright Operator of Company Since 1924; Firm Grows to Large Proportions Since Beginning with One-Horse Dray.

G. A. Wright announces that the name of the company which he has owned and operated since 1924 has been changed from Paddock Transfer & Storage Co to the Wright Transfer & Storage Co. The business was established in 1889 by M. L. Paddock. Later his two sons, Thorpe and Marion, became associated with him.

Started With One Horse

Mr. Paddock at first operated only a one-horse dray and later added wagons and horses as needed. These wagons were flat with iron stakes and chains and it was expected in the old days that customers would furnish quilts and rugs for the protection of their furniture in moving. Now vans and trucks are supplied with pads and other equipment for the benefit of the customer. The horse drawn vehicles have been replaced by the motor van and truck. Company equipment—at the present time consists of seven trucks and one trailer.

Covered and padded vans and trucks are manned by trustworthy and carefully trained men. In the old days a move by wagon for 20 miles was considered a long distance job. Today nothing is thought of moving 700 miles by motor van.

As agents of the Allied Van Lines, Inc., an organization composed of the leading warehouse companies of the United States, for moving long distances by motor van we are able to furnish a service unexcelled. Trucks owned and operated in the state of Ohio, engaged in intercity traffic, are under the jurisdiction of the Ohio public utilities commission, each cargo being insured and each vehicle carries liability insurance.

Many changes have come about in the industry of merchandise hauling. Merchants have smaller stocks on hand and as a result order more frequently and ship via parcel post and express. All can remember, and not so many years ago, when merchants would get large shipments about twice a year and for several days thereafter the sidewall in front of their places of business would be stacked with empty boxes and shipping containers reaching to the second floor.

Storage Facilities

Safe storage is provided for household goods and merchandise. On receipt of goods each piece is properly listed and necessary protection afforded.

Guaranteed mothproofing service is provided in the home or at our warehouse for overstuffed furniture, rugs, furs and clothing. It has been conservatively estimated that there is $300,000,000 moth damage annually. Much of this great loss is preventable if proper precautions are taken.

Goods for shipment long distances by freight are carefully crated and packed.

In the piano display room will be found all the latest models in grand, upright and player pianos, as well as a complete line of musical instruments and accessories for same. Pianos are for sale or rent.

Local Furnace Firm Receives Carload Lot

A carload of new furnaces has just been received by Bechtel & Wetzel of 277 West Columbia street.

The company aims to keep approximately a carload in stock to meet emergency orders promptly, the proprietors announce.

According to a New Jersey scientist it is the odor of carbon monoxide in the human breath that attracts mosquitoes to persons that they bite.

FLORIST TELLS HOW TO KEEP FLOWERS

Ben Blake Explains Best Way To Hold Freshness of Bloom.

In explaining some of the common reasons for cut flowers failing to keep Ben Blake, one of Marion's leading florists states that illuminating gas in such slight quantities that the odor cannot be detected will put flowers to sleep in a few hours. Placing flowers in a draft also shortens their period of keeping. A draft causes excessive transpiration. As a result water is given off faster than it is absorbed and the flowers wilt.

Mr. Blake also says that the depth of the water in which the blooms are placed after being cut is not so important as far as intake of water is concerned.

The changing of water in the container is a big aid in preventing bacterial action from plugging up the pores through which water is absorbed. The higher the temperature, the greater will be the development of bacteria.

A simpler method of preventing bacterial action from plugging up the vessels is to clip the stems under water.

PAINT ROUTS RUST ON METAL SURFACE

Occasional Application of Coat Will Prolong Life of Material.

Where the roofs of porches, the gutters, valleys and down spouts are of metal, tin or galvanized iron, the destructive forces of rot and rust, lying in wait for those materials can only be routed by proper paint protection. At its installation it should have been painted on both sides. Thereafter, future trouble will be avoided by painting the upper surfaces at least every two years.

Several types of paint are available and specially adapted for use on metal. When you consider that a film of paint is hardly more than one-five-hundredth part of an inch in thickness two years' service seems quite enough to ask of it.

Valleys, gutters and down spouts were probably painted as soon as they were put in position, but they need the same bi-annual care. There is a tendency today to rely upon galvanized metal. Under the most advantageous conditions the life of galvanizing is 15 years and its term of usefulness may be considerably shortened under adverse circumstances.

For instance, galvanizing, if exposed to the erosive elements of ocean air, will not serve as a protection for more than three or four years. Whereas, under the same conditions, gutters and spouts will last from 10 to 12 years if regularly painted.

The department of commerce has recently conducted a series of tests and issued a bulletin on the temperature controlling qualities of aluminum paint, in which it is stated that the heat radiation into an interior may be reduced from 25 to 50 per cent by painting the under side of a metal roof with aluminum paint. A similar treatment applied to the under surfaces of sloping eaves will materially modify the entrance of heat from the sun in summer and the escape of heat from within during the winter.

Frequent and regular painting is more important to the roof than to any other part of the home. The cost of it is a very reasonable premium to pay for adequate shelter and absence of leaks. There is a saying among painters that "you pay for paint whether you get it or not," so if only for the satisfaction of a good bargain, one should get the paint.
